QUEEN'S JUBILEE MEMORIAL TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS."-Sig.—Some misunderstanding having arisen regarding the statue of Her Majesty the Queen, and as it is desirable that the public should be made fully aware of the position, the Committee request me to approach them through the medi-

Signor Raggi tendered for the completion a statue of Her Majesty the Quoen in bronze or in marble for the sum of £5,500. It was decided at the Public Meeting held in Hongresulted in the return of 36 Socialists and 104 kong that the statue should be in marble and Her Majesty approved of the work in that form. Through some unfortunate misunderstanding, not comprehensible at the moment, Signor Raggi was left under the impression that his offer for a bronze statue was accepted and he proceeded with the necessary preparations for casting it, incurring an expenditure of time and trouble which he estimates at 21,500. The mistake was only discovered within the last few months, and the question to be determined by the Committee and the public is whether he shall be allowed to proceed with and complete the statue in bronze, or be paid for his loss of time and labour and requested to execute the work in marble The majority of the Committee think that it i seither necessary nor desirable to incur this outlay, and many persons indeed would be of opinion that in this country bronze is preferable, as less likely to be disfigured by the influences of oilmate, but the Committee do not feel that they should come to any decision without letting subscribers know how matters stand. I have therefore to ask your good offices bringing the subject before the public, and should there be any general desire to have it discussed I will call a meeting forthwith. - I am, Sir, Your obedient servant, KESWICK, Queen's Jubilee Memorial Committee. Hongkong, 11th March, 1890.

A huge bat, said to be more than three feet from tip to tip, has been forwarded to the Tokyo City Government authorities by the Governor Bonin Island. It will shortly be exhibited in the Ueno Zoological Garden. A new scheme for the Tokyo Water Works has been made, at the desire of the Committee of Improvement of the City of Tokyo, by Mr. Adolf Claus, ongineer of the Compagnie Générals des Conduites d'Eau at Liège (Belgium), who arrived in Japan some months ago. The complete design and drawings are now under the, examination of the above mentioned Committee. Since writing a day or two ago that negotiations with the Foreign powers regarding Treaty Revision had been suspended for the time being, we are informed that two or three days ago the Government communicated with the various Treaty powers requesting a delay in the ratifica. Invitations for the coming National hibition at Ueno have been issued to a number of distinguished personages in Europe and America and also to many of the foreign residents in Hongkong, Shanghai, and Vladivostock, in all to some 1,500 persons. The Jiji Shimpo says the Government have arranged with various steamship companies to carry the guests at reduced rates, also to allow those of the gnests, who shall land at Kobe or Nagasaki to travel inland free and have given instructions that they shall by supplied with presports by the Governor of the place at which they shall land without troubling their own Ministers. The President of the Exhibition has, rather ambitiously perhaps, included Lord Saliabury and Prince Bismarck in the list of invitations. It is understood of course that the number of those who cannot accept will be large. and it is stated that more invitations will be for-

SINGAPORE AND THE MILITARY CONTRIBUTION. The positions occupied by Hongkong and Singapore are in their most important aspects almost identical. Both are great commercial emporiums, both are important coaling stations, and they are close neighbours.

terest the progress of the discussion raised by the demand of the home Government for an increased military contribution from our sister colony, feeling that any argument that could be advanced against the demand would be of use to us here when our own turn comes to meet a similar demand. The demand was set out in a very able and closely reasoned despatch by Lord Khurs-FORD. It has been met by the veriest thimbleful of weak argument, but by a plentiful imputation of sordid and dishonourable motives. Because franknoss compelled us to admit that the Straits Settlements had failed to make out their case-our sympathies being naturally with the Colony rather than with the Imperial Authorities—the Free Press has accused us of being content to stand by and see Hongkong squeezed. We cannot admit that squeezing comes into the question at all. When the demand is made on Hongkong it must be examined, and if found just must be complied with; if found unjust it must be resisted. But if resistance is decided on we trust our local legislators and men of light and leading will not make the same serry exhibition of themselves as their neighbours in Singapore. The only thing in the shape of argument advanced against the demand has been that'the garrison is maintained mainly for Imperial and only to a very minor extent for local purposes. How are Imperial and local interests to be separated? The local interests, we take it, are part and parcel of Imperial interests. We might almost as well speak of English interests as distinct from Imperial interests, as to try and set up an antithesis between Imporial and local interests in the Colonies, which are not infrequently spoken of as the Greater Britain. The term "Turperial," convenient as it is in ordinary use, is apt to lead to some confusion of thought when is one ployed in serious arguinent. the term ought to represent, and is contributy used to represent, is not the unit of the United Kingdom but the realm of eight million square miles in extent of which England is the centre. The question of the military contribution does not lie between the realm and Singapore, but between England and Singapore. If the units composing the realm are to begin drawing distinctions between local and Imperial interests England may make out as good a case as the rest. If Imperial obligations are to be universally repudiated, then good-bye to the great Empire of which we are so proud.

At the recent meeting of the Colonial Institute Mr. W. KESWICK, in the discussion which followed the reading of his paper on Hongkong, replying to the remarks which had been made on the fortifications, said :--

"The only point to which I can specially take exception is that a Colony of such extreme importance—a Colony which in point of shipping statistics stands about the third in the world-should be described rather as a coaling station than as almost the most important, commorcially, in the British empire." Now Singapore runs us close in the matter of shipping; and in extent of trade, as represented by imports and exports, the Straits Settlements as a whole one not be far behind this Colony and may even be a little ahead. The absence of statistics in Hongkong renders any exact comparison impossible. Singapore, however, wishes to be considered mainly as a great coaling station, and represents its local interests as small compared with the Imperial interests involved in the maintenance of the garrison and fortifications. The representation is advanced in support of a particular case and is, we fear, made not quite ingenuously. Having figures at hand, it might have been expected that some of the speakers would have been able to advance facts in support of the position they took up. On turning to the figures of imports, and exports, however, we do not find their silence as to these surprising; however astonishing their representation of the microscopic nature of their local interests may appear under the light supplied from this source. The total value of the imports and exports of the Straits Settlements in the year 1888 was $270,238,585. Great Britain's share in this grand total is only $54,023,656, or less than one fifth. And as to this twenty-five millions worth of trade, if Great Britain assumes the sole charge of protecting it at the other end, may not the Straits Settlements be expected to defray the bulk of the cost of protecting it at this end? But they, are not asked to contribute anything to the cost of the Navy. What they are asked for is a contribution of £100,000 on account of the garrison, a sum which amounts to about a quarter of one per cent. on which has to be protected. This cannot be considered a very excessive premium to pay for the insurance afforded. In England proportion the cost of the Army and Navy bears to the trade is about four and a half per cent. But then, say our Straits friends, there is the shipping, which is mainly owned in England, and which calls at Singapore for its coal supplies. Well, the local shipping is not altogether insignificant, we believe, and as to the home shipping, Singapore is, we presume, very glad to welcome it, because shipping means trade and trade means wealth. As to the coal supplies for the Navy, our neighbours would be sorry in their own interests to see the importance of their colony as a naval station reduced. That the demand for an increased military contribution should be found unpleasant is not surprising, but we must confess to very considerable surprise at the nature of the arguments, if they can be so-called, that have been used. Our contemporary the Free Press used to be an ardent Imperial Federationist. Its idea of federation would appear to be that the British taxpayer should support to some considerable extent colonial charges. John Bull has never been found very unwilling to 0.26 dip his band into his pocket for the purpose of founding new colonies, but when these have arrived at that condition in which they can support themselves it is less than courteous to call him a rogue because he asks them to do so. This, however, is what has been done at Singapore. The demand of the home Government has been represented as an act of simple dishonesty, the haps we have not taken a sufficiently parochial view of the question. PENS FOR PLEASANT WRITING .- The Pens of Machiven & Cameron are recommended by
